

M.S.Ed. in Adult Education (Online)

Adult Education provides an online master's degree program offered from the Bloomington campus. Graduates of the master's programs work with adult learners as teachers, facilitators, program administrators, and advisors in a wide variety of fields. Adult educators are found in such diverse areas as continuing professional education, workplace education, health education, adult basic education, post-secondary education, distance education, volunteer education, correctional education, learner support services, and the military.

As the program is completed at a distance, students entering the adult education program are expected to exhibit basic skills with common computer applications.
