All international matriculants must take the proficiency test offered by the Center for English Language Training (CELT) during the week before their first semester of enrollment.

Students who receive an acceptable score on this test will be continued in or granted unconditional admission status (unless there are additional, non-language related conditions).

Students who do not receive an acceptable score (or who do not take the test) will be continued in or changed to a conditional admission status, the condition being completion of coursework recommended by CELT and/or retaking and passing the CELT examination. Students will continue in this conditional status until, in the judgement of CELT the student’s English proficiency is adequate. As with all conditionally admitted students, they will be placed on the checklist so that we may monitor adherence to the condition during each registration period.
