Education at IU

Welcome to the research guide for Education at IU-Bloomington. While this guide is not an exhaustive list of all resources for education, it may serve as a starting point for your research.

The education collection is strong in the following areas: history of education, teaching, elementary and secondary education, school finance, school administration and organization, education of women, education of children with exceptionalities, and American educational institutions.

Collections and research assistance are available in the Education Library.
